Promo Sunset Plan + Ideal Customer Profile

D2C Fashion Brand | Business Recommendations

Objective

Gradually eliminate discounts for promo-dependent segments without hurting total revenue — while protecting and expanding the organic loyalist base.

Presented by HARSH NEGI

Segment by Segment Action Plan

Segment 1 — High-Risk Promo Addicts

HARD SUNSET

333 customers · dependency_score = 3 · 8.52% revenue ($19,645)

Trigger: Every single order has a promo code applied — 100% discount dependency

Metric: Revenue per customer monthly. Pause sunset if avg ticket < $40 | Trade-off: Will lose 150-200 customers. Revenue loss ~$8-10K but margin saved on discounts offsets this.

Segment 2 — Moderate Promo Hunters

GRADUAL SUNSET

1,307 customers · dependency_score = 2 · 33.52% revenue ($77,314)

Trigger: Majority of orders use promo but not all — partial organic behavior exists

Metric: Repeat purchase rate without promo. Target: maintain >45% repeat rate | Trade-off: Risk of 15-20% volume drop short term. Long term converts some into organic loyalists.

Segment 3 — Pure Organic Loyalists

PROTECT & GROW

2,223 customers · dependency_score = 0 · 57.96% revenue ($133,670)

Trigger: Never uses discount codes — genuine brand affinity

Metric: Avg LTV growth quarter on quarter | Trade-off: Offering unprompted discounts trains them to wait for deals — protect organic behavior at all costs.

HOW MARKETING CAN USE THIS TODAY

01 Paid Ads Targeting

Target 40–45 age group in Kansas, Connecticut & Tennessee. Zero discount messaging — lead with premium brand story, not price.

02 Lookalike Audiences

Upload the 963 High-Value customer list to Meta/Google Ads. Create lookalike audience to find new buyers with similar organic behavior.

03 Acquisition Messaging

This customer does NOT respond to SALE headlines. Lead with quality, craftsmanship, and brand identity.

04 Channel Strategy

Non-PayPal payment preference indicates direct, intentional purchase behavior. Prioritize direct checkout optimization over PayPal flows.
